LAMINAR AIR FLOW

Laminar flow cabinets do have a Laminar Air Flow is an enclosed bench designed to prevent contamination by biological particles (BP) or any particle sensitive device. This closed cabinet is made up of stainless steel without any gap or joint/where spaces might collect.

As it draws through a High Efficiency Particulate Air (HEPA) filter and blows in a very smooth flow of sterile air into a fluid flows in a parallel layer with no disruption between the layers.

Laminar flow cabinets are equipped with a ultraviolet germicidal lamp to sterilize the shell or cabinet or the surface of the hood. The hood should be turned on about 15-20 minutes before use.

It is important to switch off the light during use as it may cause mutation and may give any exposed skin surfaces and may cause cancerous. It is required to wipe down the cabinet surface
